

The Woman Who Leads the Room

I Am Her.

An invitation-only evening · Friday 28th August 2026 · Milton Keynes

A CORPORATE PARTNERSHIP OVERVIEW BY EVENT PERFECT GLOBAL

The Quiet Erosion

High-performing women aren't burning out. They're disappearing behind their roles.

Most organisations invest in performance, leadership development, and resilience programmes. All important. All necessary. But there's a conversation workplaces still avoid:

What happens when senior women slowly lose the parts of themselves that make them powerful?

Not burnout. Not poor performance. The quiet erosion of identity and confidence beneath the pressure. The skipped lunches. The rushed mornings. The cancelled appointments. The 'I'm fine' that hides exhaustion.

The Woman Who Leads the Room exists to change that. Not with another seminar or tick-box initiative — with a room designed entirely around her. Slower. Quieter. More considered.

A new approach to leadership wellbeing that supports the human, not just the title.

Invitations are issued. This is a curated room — and every detail reflects that.

The Room Is 100 Women. The Reach Is Tens of Thousands.

Each of the 100 women in this room is a leader of her own.

Behind every woman is a team she leads. A client base she serves. A community that listens. A circle of women who trust her judgement.

Senior Aesthetics Clinician

A direct client base across Milton Keynes — women who trust her recommendations.

Former Mayor

A civic network that spans the city and the women who shape it.

Advertising Network Founder

A network of 35,000+ women — reached directly through her platforms.

Senior Banking Executive

Recommendations that land directly with women across her professional circle.

The room reaches further than its walls.

Layered on top — the I Am Her pre-event editorial campaign features each woman across her own platforms, ours, and partner channels in the weeks before the evening. The conversation reaches the wider room before the room itself opens.

For aligned brand partners, this means visibility not just to 100 women in one evening — but across each of their networks, the editorial coverage, and the campaign's reach.

Why Your Organisation Should Be in This Room

This is not traditional sponsorship. It's a strategic investment — in the women you employ, the women in your customer base, and the conversation your brand wants to be part of.

Invest visibly in your women

The senior women in your organisation rarely receive recognition beyond performance. This is a tangible, considered investment in the women who hold everything together.

Build relationships in a room of influence

The women in this room are founders, executives, senior professionals, and decision-makers — many running businesses that fall directly within your customer profile.

Align your brand with the new leadership wellbeing conversation

This is the beginning of a new approach to leadership wellbeing — one that reconnects people to the identity behind the role. Brand partners aligned with this conversation become part of the story it tells.

Turn values into visible action

Policies matter. Statements matter. Experiences create stories. Your women leave the room having been genuinely seen — and they talk about it.

Be part of the room from the beginning

Founding partners help shape the inaugural experience. Some rooms are attended. Others become talked about.

This is for organisations that understand the value of investing in women — not just as employees, but as leaders, decision-makers, clients, customers, and the future of business.

Media & Editorial Momentum

MKFM — Live Coverage

The Woman Who Leads the Room has been featured by MKFM, Milton Keynes' local radio station — with a regional reach of up to 2 million across DAB Digital Radio and recognised as the local station by 71.7% of MK residents.

Editorial Coverage — Confirmed

A freelance journalist also working with local and national media has confirmed editorial coverage of the event, with the angle focused on the leadership wellbeing gap for women in corporate environments. Further local and national press conversations are underway.

Radio Platform — Offered

We have been offered a radio platform to discuss leadership wellbeing and the support gap for women in corporate environments, with influential voices in the industry joining the conversation.

Founding corporate partners will be named in coverage as the event builds.

The Room Is Filling. Quietly.

This is the inaugural edition of The Woman Who Leads the Room — 100 women, one evening, Milton Keynes. The first of a UK-wide platform with future editions planned beyond the city.

100 Women.

The capacity is fixed and deliberately intimate. Once the room is full, it is full.

Inaugural Edition

Founding partners and founding guests are remembered as where it began.

Premium Brand Partners — In Conversation

We are in active conversation with founding brand partners, including a leading national name. First reveals are scheduled for May.

Co-Creation Window — Closes End of June

Partners confirmed by end of June have the opportunity to co-create branded moments inside the evening — bespoke product placement, signature touches, and tailored brand experiences shaped into the room itself.

"The room is filling quietly. And we think that says everything." — Lynda Johnson, Founder, Event Perfekt Global

Partnership Options

The packages below are starting points, not fixed terms. We work with each organisation to shape something that fits both their budget and how they want to show up.

Individual Sponsored Seat · £300 + VAT per seat Nominate one woman from your organisation. Best for recognising or rewarding a senior woman beyond performance. Women attend as themselves — recognition rather than sponsorship.	Corporate Table · £2,400 + VAT (eight seats) Eight places for your leadership cohort or senior women. Full evening experience included. Recognition across event communications. Best suited to organisations investing meaningfully in their women.	Founding Partnership · From £25,000 + VAT Limited to three organisations. Your brand woven into the room. Includes a corporate table of eight, a dedicated in-room brand moment, co-creation rights, editorial photography featuring your branding, named visibility across event and press coverage, and priority invitation allocation. Founding partnerships protect the strongest media association and the co-creation window.

We welcome conversations around shapes not listed above — speaking moments, brand-led co-creation, women-in-business programme alignment, and other formats.

This investment may align with marketing, DEI, employee engagement, talent development, women-in-business programmes, or leadership development budgets — depending on the route chosen.

Let's Talk

If this feels aligned with your organisation and the women you champion — we would love to hear from you. No hard sell. Just a conversation.
